Report 245: Mental Health, Wellness, and Resilience for Transit System Workers

Making Connections
The National Transit Workforce Conference
Tuesday, November 12, 2024

Research Objectives

The objective of Report 245 was to develop a comprehensive guidebook and interactive products that would assist transit agencies and other stakeholders in exploring or implementing approaches to identify and mitigate the factors that cause negative impacts on mental health, wellness, and resilience for transit system workers.

The research will address the contributing factors to a transit employee's mental health by:

- Documenting the stressors experienced by transit system workers during pre-and peri-pandemic times;
- Documenting the impacts of those stressors at the individual and organizational levels;
- Documenting any differences seen by race, ethnicity, gender, age, and occupation;
- Identifying protective factors and actions that would help proactively develop, promote, and sustain a culture that supports the mental health, well-being, and resilience of transit workers (methods, models, and programs);
- Evaluating the impacts of existing programs, policies, and practices, including labor-management relations and work organization, to address mental health issues;
- Documenting the role of supervisory support in helping employees to manage exposure to stressors; and
- Recommending best practices for transit systems to support the mental health of transit employees (including programs, outreach, education, and bargaining).

Healthy Work Strategies

Healthy Work Strategies include workplace policies, programs, contract language, regulations and laws designed to reduce sources of stress at work (work stressors), and to make work and workers healthier. Each report below is a summary about how to improve the organization of work to reduce work stressors, such as:

Long work hours, bullying, sexual harassment, discrimination, threats of violence, understaffing, job insecurity, lack of supervisor or coworker support, work-family conflict, job demands, lack of job control, job strain, and “effort-reward imbalance.”
